Trees are essential

Trees found in backyards, city streets, and parks make up nearly 25% of America's tree canopy. Forests in the southeastern United States alone help to filter 50% of the nation's water supply and absorb 12% of carbon emissions. The everyday activities of people depend on the silent work of the environment to keep us moving.

Trees are essential to...

- reducing the greenhouse effect
- producing clean air
- providing food
- cooling cities and streets
- generating oxygen
- preserving natural habitats

Walk Green 2017 Impact

The Nature Conservancy (TNC) will plant 99,750 trees at Plant a Billion Trees projects in Mississippi Floodplain Forest & Long Leaf Pine Forest. This will help restore Long Leaf Pine forests across nine states and Mississippi Floodplain forest. These trees will be planted within one year.

TNC's "Healthy Trees, Healthy Cities" initiative helps enhance city urban forests through tree-planting, stewardship and tree health monitoring. TNC will also plant and maintain 250 trees of various sizes as part of planned tree plantings in cities within their urban network.

At BAPS Charities, we aim to serve globally by acting locally. Your support of Walk Green 2017 will fund efforts to strengthen the work of the following beneficiaries and BAPS Charities activities.
